take place at Assembly Hall next week. It is said to be a drama of great beauty. It is the meeting of the Mortals and the Fairies. First-May, then May-Queen, with tableau. Enter Fairies, who hear the sound of music and haste away. The Queen's attendants sing, "Wake, Mayers, Wake." Response by the Mayers-"Hail, Sisters, Hail!" They meet upon the stage, and, while singing in unison, they form themselves in a half-circle to receive the Queen. Morning dawns. After her salutation the herald announces the approach of the Queen. As the little page presents the crown the coronation is interrupted by the entrance of the Fairy Queen and court. The Queen seeing that she has usurped the throne of the Fairy Queen welcomes her, and her pardon asks. The Fairy Queen replies that she has come to be her guest. After which she introduces her graces, fairies, and attendants to the mortals. Perceiving that a shower is near, the Queen bids her court haste away-the fairies waving their wands slowly make their exit, singing, "Follow, follow where we guide thee." After the shower the rainbow makes its appearance; then the sun. The Queen's court pay their respects to her Majesty. The graces and fairies return and bring the Queen her wished for treasure. The poetry is beautiful, the chemical lights said to be fine, and the whole will doubtless be a scene of beauty. The song "Good

SPECTACULAR, MUSICAL, AND FLORAL DRAMA. A spectacular, musical, and floral drama will known First Regiment band was engaged, and Messrs. E. P. Hulce and Charles Clinely, of Jackson Ward (who had immediate charge of this part of the programme), canvassed each ward of the city, after having procured a large and comfortable wagon, drawn by spirited horses, in which the band and these gentlemen were seated. The effeet may be well imagined. The inspiring music attracted the attention of hundreds of persons, and by 8 o'cleck an immense concourse of citizens, among whom were many ladies, gathered in the neighborhood of the The decorations were very striking, and were arranged with a wonderful degree of taste.
